HARIKESANALLUR MUTHIAH BHAGAVATHAR

by Ms. PADMA SRINIVASAN

Most of us are familiar with the kritis 'Himagiritanaye' in Suddhadhanyasi popularized by GNB and 'Vijayambike' in Vijayanagari as well as 'Jalandara' in Valaji rendered by Madurai Mani Iyer in the early fifties. These and other compositions, all bearing the well known 'HARIKESA' mudhra or signature, are the works of the famous Harikesanallur Muthiah Bhagavathar on whom the title 'Gayakasikhamani' was conferred by Maharaja Krishna Rajendra Wodeyar of Mysore in 1927.

Muthiah Bhagavathar was born on Nov. 15, 1877 at Punalveli near Srivilliputhur (close to Tirunelveli) to Lingam Iyer and Anandam Ammal. Bhagavathar's niece and nephew who were named after his parents in the old tradition were my neighbors in Kovilpatti during my childhood. I specially feel privileged to write this article because of the friendship with members of his family. Vaidyalingam, who was adopted by Bhagavathar learnt many of the latter's compositions. In fact, Vaidyalingam taught me the kriti 'Ashtadasa' in Simmendramadyanam with all its many beautiful sangathis.

Muthiah Bhagavathar composed in simple language and was equally felicitious in Tamil, Telugu and Sanskrit. He used words sparingly but with much meaning. Most of his songs are in praise of Devi. Besides many kirtanas, Bhagavathar has also composed a few Tana Varnams in Adi and Ata Tala as well as Tillanas and Ragamalikas. As a Samsthana Vidwan of Mysore, several compositions in praise of Chamundeswari have been authored by him. In addition to the Maharaja of Mysore, the rulers of Ramnad, Ettayapuram, Andipatti as well as the Maharaja of Travancore were also his patrons. The latter conferred a doctorate on Muthiah Bhagavathar in recognition of his book 'Sangeetha Kalpa Dhrumam'. The composer showed his regard for Balaramavarma of Travancore through the words 'Padmanabha Vanchibhoopala Balaramavarma Bhagyanrupala' in a Hamsanandi Tillana. (Vanchi denotes Kerala in Malayalam.)

Bhagavathar was also well known for his Harikatha performances. So popular were some of his Harikatha songs that they were included in concerts. 'Mavoor Valar Maharani' in Jonpuri is a good example of this genre. He is also credited as the composer of kirtanas in rare ragas with the elaboration of numerous sangathis. He was in Benares for a while and appears to have been impressed by classical North Indian music. This influence can be appreciated in the songs 'Needumahima' in Hamsanandi and

'Sarasamukhi' in Gowdamalhar. He also created works in new ragas. Examples of these would be 'Vanchtonu' in Kararanjani, 'Saravanabhava' in Pasupathipriya and 'Vijayambike' in Vijayanagari. There are also noteworthy compositions in Kathanakuthuhalam, Bowli and Mohanakalyani.

Muthiah Bhagavathar modelled himself after the musical style of Thyagaraja whom he ardently worshipped. In later life, the influence of Dikshithar can also be perceived in mellow compositions rich in gamakas. The sahithya of his works can be compared to that of modern composers such as Patnam Subramanya Iyer and Ramanathapuram Srinivasa Iyengar. Bhagavathar's style appears to have inspired GNB's compositions with their many sangathis, though there is a difference in emphasis. GNB dwelt on the musical qualities of the words while Bhagavathar stressed literary excellence in his kritis. One can find examples for this quality in 'Thamasamika' in Abhogi, 'Paramukhamela' in Kanada and 'Unnadiye' in Bahudari.

Bhagavathar was one of the founders of the Music Academy in Madras. He was honored with the title of Sangeethakalanidhi in 1930 when he was elected the President of the Conference. He spent his last years in Mysore, where he died on June 30, 1945 at the age of sixty-eight.
